The Fort Mason Foundation, a privately-funded nonprofit organization, is engaged in renovating surplus military buildings at Fort Mason, headquarters of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area. The Foundation administers Fort Mason Center which is located on the Bay between Aquatic Park and the Marina Green. In almost seven years, the Center has become a national model for low-cost community-responsive urban parks.

We invite you to bring your conferences, classes, performances, meetings or benefits to Fort Mason. Space for suitable activities is available for a nominal daily or hourly fee. Enjoy the pleasure of teaching, working, or performing in this unusual national park location. Call 441-5706 for booking appointments and information.

ON F.O.R.'S 10TH ANNIVERSARY—THE RECORD SPEAKS FOR ITSELF

This year marks the 10th anniversary of Friends of the River, an organization originally formed to support the ballot measure to protect the Stanislaus River in 1974. For the last 5 years F.O.R. has been one of the many environmental groups with offices in Fort Mason Center.

Friends of the River is the group that has an eye on your western rivers and wetlands. They don't choose easy battles but over the years they have learned the political process. This means a knowledge of how to research, educate, and legislate to improve environmental quality and protect our river and water resources. Work has been done on both state and national legislation, with the courts and with regulatory proceedings.

In California, Friends of the River has worked to save rivers such as the American, the Tuolumne, the Stanislaus, and the Klamath, as well as other creeks and streams. They have improved the state and federal governments' procedures for managing public water. Due to ongoing conservation efforts, hundreds of thousands of people are enjoying California's rivers and trout streams.

F.O.R.'s legislative and research staff in Sacramento is working hard to insure enforcement and implementation of sound environmental and fiscal policies for managing California's water resources.

Of special concern this year are proposals of canal-like facilities that could affect water quality standards for the Sacramento Delta and San Francisco Bay. F.O.R. is continuing to promote appropriate alternatives to costly water projects while advocating protection and restoration of rivers and wetlands in California.

In Arizona F.O.R.'s engineering research and public testimony helped persuade Interior Secretary Watt to back down on a plan to disrupt the Colorado River through the Grand Canyon. The Federal government has now shelved a plan which would have varied the flow of the Colorado through one of America's most popular National Parks.

F.O.R. published the first-ever guide to public involvement in the decisions of the Federal Energy Commission, which regulates energy proposals on all our rivers. Used by environmental groups, resource agencies, and developers across the country, this manual works like a sunshine law, making sure that regular citizens are heard. They also published the first-ever private study of a river's qualifications for the National Wild and Scenic River System. Due to budgetary cuts, resource agencies are slow to initiate, much less complete such studies which are required before Congressional action can be taken. F.O.R.'s effort is serving as a model for other private groups to take up the government's slack and lay the groundwork for expanding this outstanding park system.

Friends of the River is a membership organization ($20 per year) and members receive a bimonthly newsletter with updates on important water issues, along with announcements of educational activities and river outings. This summer F.O.R. is sponsoring a number of river trips on California rivers. Their office also has an active volunteer program where people can learn the day to day operations of a conservation organization by helping with a variety of projects and activities. F.O.R.'s office, located in Building C, is open to the public. Drop by for information on conservation campaigns, volunteer work and river outings.

J. PORTER SHAW LIBRARY TO OPEN ITS DOORS

Formerly located in some old bathrooms and showers of the San Francisco Maritime Museum, the J. Porter Shaw Library has made its home in Fort Mason Center since the spring of 1983 and looks forward to a public opening sometime during the fall.

According to principal librarian Dave Hull, the J. Porter Shaw Library is one of the four pre-eminent libraries in the country dealing with maritime history. The library has grown significantly since its beginning in 1957 and now contains a large collection of rare books, periodicals, photographs, oral histories, logbooks and other resources.

Hull describes the library as operating like that of a graduate school because it is "essentially a research library on the cutting edge of its field." To aid researchers who wish to use the library a number of facilities are being established; for scholars working on long-term projects there are three rooms available that can be used for periods of one week, one month or three months; a special typing room has been set aside (you must bring your own machine) and rooms will be available in which one can listen to oral histories, look at photographs and read microfilm. Though material cannot be taken out of the library, a soon-to-be-installed Xerox machine will make it possible for information to be taken home.

Now, after an enormous amount of work has been done by the Park Service to renovate the library's facilities, the end is in sight. Describing the process, Hull says simply, "It's been a long struggle and we're delighted to be here." Until the public opening in the fall, the library (located on the top floor of Building E) is open on an interim basis from 1-5pm, Tuesday through Friday. Afterwards, the library will be open on Saturdays as well. Though construction is not yet complete, the J. Porter Shaw Library is really taking shape with a donation of cast iron and oak bookshelves from the Stanford Library, new carpet and paint and, of course, a fabulous view of the bay. So take advantage of the J. Porter Shaw Library, one of the lesser-known treasures Fort Mason Center has to offer.

PHELAN ART AWARD RECIPIENTS SELECTED FOR EXHIBIT AT WORLD PRINT GALLERY

Five artists have been chosen to receive James D. Phelan Awards in Printmaking—Holly Downing of Santa Rosa, Margo Humphrey of Oakland, Lynn Klein of Minneapolis, Roy Ragle of San Francisco and Christine Riedell, also of San Francisco.

Sponsored by the San Francisco Foundation, the James D. Phelan Art Award recognizes California-born artists between the ages of 20 and 40 for demonstrated talent in their fields of endeavor. This year's art award, in the field of printmaking, is being organized by the World Print Council at Fort Mason in San Francisco. Jurors were Therese Heyman, Curator of Prints and Photographs at the Oakland Museum, and Constance Glenn, Director of the University Art Museum, California State University Art Museum, California State University, Long Beach.

All five artists will be represented in a group exhibit at the World Print Gallery. Opening July 6 and closing September 2, the show will include mezzotints by Holly Downing, color lithographs by Margo Humphrey, mixed media prints by Lynn Klein, woodcuts by Roy Ragle and color gum bichromate prints by Christine Riedell. All of the artists receive a $1500 prize and the opportunity to show their work at the World Print Gallery.

An illustrated brochure will accompany the show. In addition, photographs of the exhibited work are available.

The World Print Gallery is located at Fort Mason Center, Building B, third floor. Gallery hours are 10am to 5pm, Monday through Friday.
